Our Masterclass Stands Out

We often get asked “ how can I do things differently?”, “how can I effectively incorporate technology into my programmes?”, “what advice can you give me to up my game as a learning designer?”

Our Masterclass helps experienced learning practitioners become blended learning ninjas. It's all about the design of learning experiences that blend fit-for-purpose methods and modes of learning – both face-to-face and technology-enabled.

Everyone plays an active role in the learning process. Participants build a network of people who they can reach out to. It's like our participants are actors in a martial arts production who become a community that continues to work together well after the production ends.

We play the role of sensei afterwards, helping participants to evolve their designs, implement them and evaluate their successes. In this way, we make sure that all participants reach full blended learning ninja status.

The series consists of six 3-hour workshops over a period of 12 weeks. Participants will continue their learning journey by working on their own and with their peers outside of the classroom. This requires approximately 2 hours per week.
